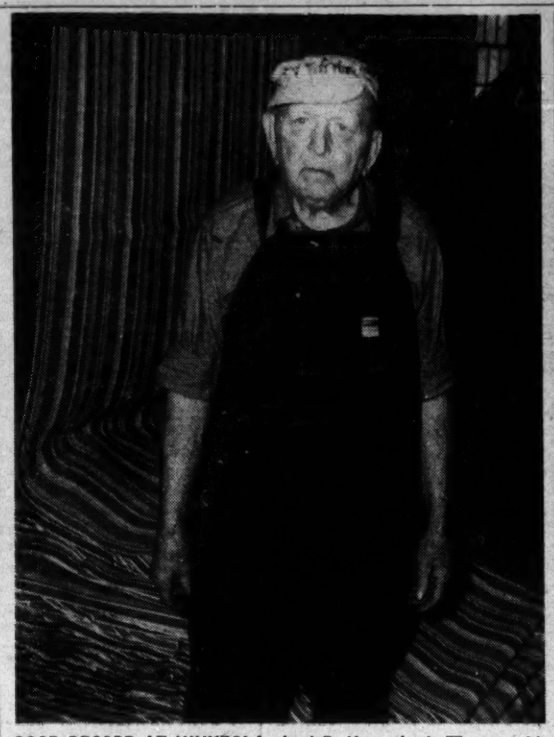
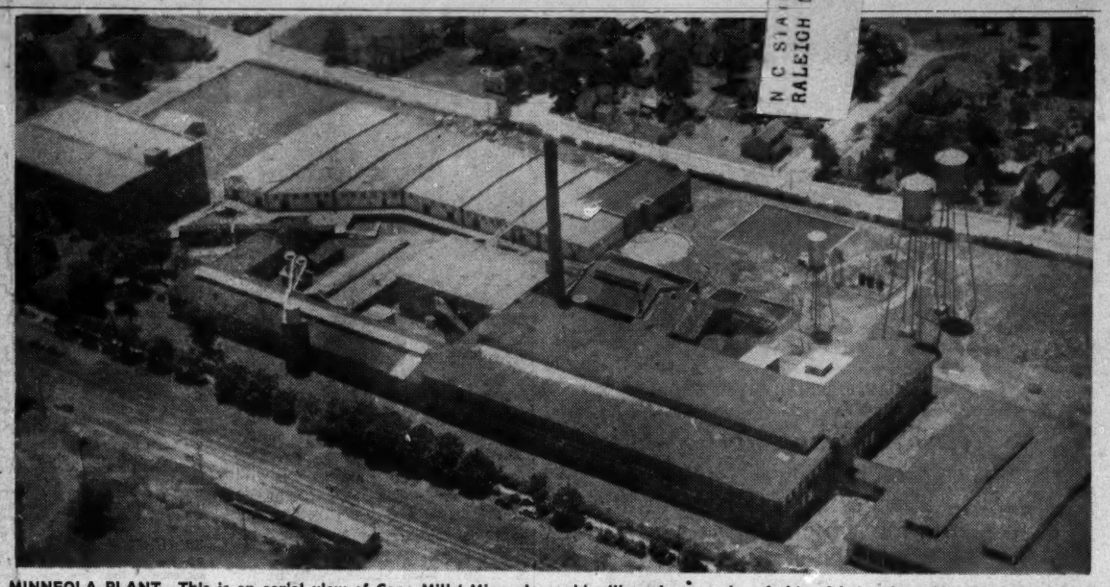
PINEVILLE SUGGESTION—Joe D. Lavender, employee in the Spinning Department at Pineville Plant, recently suggested that a ratchet pawl be put on the swing arm of the spinning frame. The purpose of the pawl is to prevent the back and middle roll from turning or back lashing. This is supposed to help reduce the number of thick and thin places in the yarn. Mr. Lavender received an award from Cone Mills Corporation for his idea.



GOOD RECORD AT MINNEOLA—Levi D. May, who is 77 years old, did not miss a single day at his job in the Finishing Department at Minneola Plant, Gibsonville during 1955. Mr. May, like the many other Cone employees who had a perfect attendance record for the entire year, sets a fine example for others. By being on the job each working day such employees make it possible for the mills to operate more efficiently.



MINNEOLA PLANT—This is an aerial view of Cone Mills' Minneola Plant in Gibsonville, employing approximately 550 people. Incorporated in 1888, Minneola became a Cone mill in 1900. This 68-year-old mill produces modern fashion fabrics, Cone Play Denim and fancy cotton shirtings. One hundred and five employees with 25 years or more continuous service will be honored at Gibsonville on March 3.

Proximity Y's Men Host To City Area Clubs

The Proximity Y's Men's Club was host in a joint meeting of the Y's Men's Clubs of the Greensboro Area, including White Oak and Central Y.M.C.A. Clubs, last Tuesday night. Broadus Troxler, governor of the Piedmont District of Y's Men's Clubs, had charge of the program, and introduced Dale Norris of Kannapolis, director of the Southeastern Region of Y'sdom. Mr. Norris spoke on "Some thing we need to Y's up to in Y's-dom."

He informed the clubs of its responsibility at the local and national levels, pointing out that the International Convention of the Y's Men's Club will be held at Estes Park, Colorado, in June, and that each club should have representatives at this meeting, and that it is equired of each club to have a representative at the International Convention at least every two years.

He discussed the expansion program, calling upon each club to reach out into nearby towns and communities, in organized and unorganized areas of the Y.M.C.A., and organize a Y's Men's Club.

He told them to keep local club attendance at a high level of active participation, and if one is absent from his own club one meeting, he can make up his attendance by attending another Y's Men's Club meeting or the meeting of the Board of directors of his Y's Men's Club.

Mr. Troxler reminded them that new members for the club give the club 10 points at the national level, and to lose a member they lose ten points. Growth in membership is the life of any club.

He announced that the district convention will be held in the spring, members should get under way in the planning now, every member of the club attending and bring along Y's Menettes. The Regional Convention will be held at Norfolk in the fall. This is a new club and was organized by the Proximity Y's Men's Club. Great things are anticipated at the Norfolk Convention.

At the close of the address a tape recording was given from various men in leadership of Y's Men's Club attending the World's Conference in Paris, France, in which they spoke from Egypt, Brussels, Sweden, Liberia, Peru, United States, Hawaii, the Phillipines and Jerusalem, Palestine.

The Y's Men's Club is a service organization of the Y.M.C.A., and through its organized committee service helps conduct membership campaigns, special drives in the local community, works with boys' clubs and athletic groups, sponsors special tournaments and seasonal activities. Every Y.M.C.A. needs a wide awake Y's Men's Club, and every Y's Men's Club needs a strong active Association in which to operate.

Other guests attending the meeting and sitting at the head table were Clarence Price, president of the Central YMCA Club and Frank Starling, president of the White Oak Club.

Mrs. Hattie Crabtree Has Many Memories Of Her Days At Eno

Mrs. Hattie Crabtree, employed for 28 years in the Spinning Department of the Eno Plant, Hillsboro, retired recently.

Upon being interviewed, Mrs. Crabtree, a widow for 26 years who made a home for 15 children, said that she had looked forward to each day, enjoyed her work and being a neighbor to her fellowman. After she had reared her own children, she made a home for two motherless ones.

"I have really enjoyed fun and many laughs that my co-workers and I have had together. Taking into my confidence the officials as well as my personal friends I worked with, I tried to be gay, happy and smiling as much as possible."

About Cone Mills she says, "I really want to praise a wonderful company, united together, treating employees with respect and generosity at all times."

Known to most people as Granny Crabtree, she says that as she looks at the many faces of the people about her she has such a wonderful feeling, because she can remember when they made their appearance into the world, and she has watched them grow to adulthood.

"Through births, deaths, my memories will linger on. Even after retiring, I will have no dull moments. In the future, I can think of the happy events of the past."

Mrs. Maude C. Tucker, of West Hillsboro, one of the five surviving children of Mrs. Crabtree, states, "No task was ever too big for her

The game was much closer than the final score indicates. At the half, Cone Y led by only 8 points with the score being 48-40. At the end of the third quarter South Boston had cut the All-Star's lead to a mere 2 points. Cone Y scored 36 points in the fourth quarter while holding South Boston to 25 points to boost their lead to the final 13 point margin.

Dwight M. Davidson, office manager, will be honored at the Minneola Plant Service Award dinner on March 3 for having completed 50 years of continuous service with the plant office. Mr. Davidson, son of Berry Davidson, founder of Minneola Manufacturing Company, was born in Alamance County on February 15, 1886 just before his father moved to Gibsonville and built the plant. The father served as president of Minneola until 1895. The Cone family had bought interest in the company in 1892.

Mr. Davidson, the only Minneola employee with the distinction of having 50 years continuous employment there, attended the Gibsonville public schools and was graduated from Elon College in 1905.

He began work in the Minneola Manufacturing Company office on February 23, 1906.

On July 12, 1911, Mr. Davidson was married to Miss Pauline Elizabeth Murray. Their three children are Dwight M. Davidson, Jr., F. Murray Davidson and Mrs. Eleanor Davidson Long.

The half-century employee has served his community in many different capacities. He was mayor of Gibsonville for 20 years (1913-1933). He later served on the board of aldermen and was justice of the peace for 25 years. Mr. Davidson was a member of the Gibsonville school board for many years and is a charter member of the Rotary Club there. The veteran Cone employee has served in several capacities in Boy Scout activities both in his local area and in Guilford County.

Minneola Manufacturing Company (as it was previously known) was founded 68 years ago. Today it produces the modernly designed and expertly woven Cone Play Denim and fancy cotton shirtings, a familiar fabric in the fashion world.

It was for the purpose of manufacturing "of cotton threads, cloths and fabrics and general merchandise" that Minneola was incorporated at Gibsonville in 1888. This fact was recorded in the early Greensboro newspaper, The Daily Workman.

The corporation was organized by Berry Davidson, Joseph A. Davidson and John W. Page, all of this state and Charles W. Fisher of South Carolina.

At the birth of the new business the authorized capital stock was $40,000 and by 1906, it had extended to $100,000 and later to $200,000.

Moses H. Cone and Julius W. Cone became directors in 1893, and two years later, Ceasar Cone was elected president, serving until 1896. Due to numerous other responsibilities, he resigned his position, and B. Frank Mebane took over at Minneola.

The Cone family acquired the controlling interest in the mill in 1900, and in July of that year, Julius W. Cone was elected president and served until 1905. David Dreyfus succeeded Mr. Cone, serving until 1909 when Clarence M. Guggenheimer became president. Clarence N. Cone, Sr. became vice president that same year and served until his death in 1929. Herman Cone became president there in 1930 and Clarence N. Cone, Jr., in 1946.

James R. Young was secretary-treasurer and manager of the mill from 1909 until his retirement in 1951. He was succeeded by Alan W. Cone. When the mill became Minneola Plant of Cone Mills Corporation in 1952, Mr. Cone continued as its manager.

Clarence N. Cone, a vice president of Cone Mills Corporation, is the official in charge of operations at Minneola. Paul Walker is superintendent and E. Ralph Allen, assistant superintendent.

Minneola has kept pace with the demands of the fashion world, and even in War Time contributed useful fabrics for combat and hospital use.

The Minneola employees are leaders in the Gibsonville Community. They take active part in civic government, school associations, scouting and other worthwhile undertakings.

Charlotte Textile Club Hears Cone Official

Japanese textile mills are competition for American mills in employee attitude, plant efficiency and artistic skill, Marion W. Heiss, Cone Mills Corporation vice president, told the Greater Charlotte Textile Club last Monday night.

Mr. Heiss called for congressional action to impose quotas on Japanese textiles as the only remaining aid for America's hard-hit textile industry.

The Cone official who made his second trip to Japan last Fall, told the textile men that the 13-cent-an hour Japanese wage rate is just one factor in the competitive edge over the U. S. mills. He pointed out that the Japanese workers seem to love their work.

Mr. Heiss predicted that Japan will become the most artistic country in the world in textile design.

No Laughing Matter

Comic books on the newsstands today have ceased to be a laughing matter. Finding one this day in time which slightly resembles comedy is a rarity. The majority of the periodicals appeals to the lewd, sinister and depraved mind. What is worse, these publications are creating a following among the youth whose minds are still in a formative state.

The O. Henry Woman's Club, a fairly new civic organization in Greensboro, this week has taken upon itself the task of making a survey of 56 outlets in the city for so-called comic books and other salacious literature. Backed by Sheriff John E. Walters, this group intends to present a brief of its findings to the next assembly of the State Legislature. They hope that the laws governing the sale of such material will be made more effective.

One of the main objectives of this survey is to make Greensboro citizens conscious of the type of reading material available to young people. Not only do they hope to arouse such a consciousness in this city but also throughout the state.

Parents today cannot put much faith in the approval of many publications by the Code Authority of the Comics Association of America, Inc., because this association is supported by the majority of the comic book publishers themselves.

The Reverend Jesse L. Murrell, D.D., chairman of the Cincinnati Committee on Evaluation of Comic Books, a volunteer organization, has compiled a list of objectionable comic books now on the stands. Many of those on the objectionable list bear the Comic Association's Code seal.

Strange to say, since the coming of the code, the list of objectionable publications has grown rather than decreased. During this past year, 50 per cent of the comics published were on the objectionable list.

The O. Henry Woman's Club is asking all parents to examine magazines in the grocery stores, drug stores and other news outlets. Parents may, if necessary, boycott such places.

Other civic and community clubs would find a worthwhile project in advancing this campaign in their own particular communities.

Of course, we realize that many adults who happen also to be parents are guilty of reading such magazines. Education of these persons is important for themselves as well as for their children.

Dr. Murrell states, "The welfare of this nation's young makes it mandatory that all concerned unite in supporting sincere effort of the comic industry to raise the standard of its products and in demonstrating adequate standards of decency and good taste."

The Textorian gladly endorses this campaign and urges its readers to assist in cleaning up the newsstands.

Let's put back the comedy in the comics!

A Public Servant

The horse and buggy age is over. Gone are the gaslights and high button shoes of yesteryear. And as America speeds swiftly along the path of progress, we would like to focus attention today on Advertising, the stimulus that has made a great deal of this prosperity possible. Next week is National Advertising Week, and we would do well to pay tribute to the indispensable role that advertising plays in our economy.

America's mines and farms produce more, America's mills and factories manufacture more than any other nation in the world. All this activity is predicated on one fact: that markets have been pre-conditioned to absorb that vast output of goods. So advertising, by establishing the public acceptance of a product, by bringing people the information they need before making a purchase—advertising becomes the gear that spins the wheels of progress smoothly.

The great contribution that advertising makes to our way of life cannot be denied. But let's see how advertising especially benefits each one of us every day.

If, for example, the daily newspapers carried no advertisements, the average person would find it much more difficult to shop so conveniently and intelligently. People today depend on the ads to guide them, just as the buyers of old depended on the merchant displaying his wares in the marketplace. Through advertising, we're able to know where to go to get exactly what we want; we can compare product advantages before we buy we discover the day-to-day bargains that help each of us get the most out of our dollars.

And let's not forget that the competition is keen for your favor. This leads to a constant flow of improvments and innovation—which has brought us a standard of living never before attained by any nation. And all of this would have been impossible without advertising, because it would be financially foolish for our great manufacturers to invest large sums of money in development and research if they had no assurance that the people would be informed—and encouraged to buy—the product of their genius. Yet for all the fabulous results of advertising, the cost is remarkably little. The advertising for a loaf of bread amounts to less than the wrapper; for cigarettes less than ½c a pack; for milk, less than 1/10c a quart. It's hard to envision a more economical way to do business.

KNOWLEDGE IS POWER

By Frank K. Levin

HISTORY

Are visual aids valuable in learning?

Yes, and the "history Time Chart" prepared especially for readers of "Knowledge is Power" demonstrates this extremely well. We read about the history of Egypt, the Sumerian City-Kingdoms, Assyria, the Persian Empire, the Kingdom of Judah, the Aegean Civilization, Troy, Greece, Rome and other great historical periods. Often these great ages are covered in a chapter or two of a textbook, and it is difficult to realize the vast number of years over which these civilizations extended. Compare, however, the entire period covered by Medieval and Modern History, the period covered by the history of the United States, with the length of these ancient eras. When you do this you see in a concrete and dramatic way the great span of time covered by the historical ages of the past. More and more visual aids should be used in the teaching of history to make immediate and factual mankind's meaningful experiences which have culminated in our present age.

Of Cars And Men

In a recent symposium of the American College of Surgeons, a number of leading surgeons suggested changes in design and equipment to reduce automobile injuries. Suggestions included strengthing the seats to withstand force of sudden stops, attaching retractable seat belts, providing telescoping steering columns, installing doors which will not "fly open" on impact, covering dashboard with a four inch thick foam material crash panel, removing sharp projections on instruments and rear-view mirrows and re-designing the nose to include two and one-half feet of material which will crumple slowly, absorbing the shock of a crash.

The surgeons estimated that these seven changes would result in approximately an 80% reduction in auto deaths and injuries.

An auto industry spokesman answered these suggestions by pointing out that the industry builds cars that the public wants, and that until the consumer indicates a greater interest in safety, little progress will be made. He pointed out that today's motorist wants beauty, comfort, power and speed more than he does safety. He further noted that even though safety belts have been available for about five years, the general public hasn't seen fit to use them. While admitting that it would take a lot of engineering to incorporate all the suggestions made by the doctors, he implied that most of them could be built into the car of the future if motorists wanted them badly enough.

This brings us right back to the matter of education. We know that for years we have been beating our brains out trying to get workers to make use of the safety devices that engineers have provided. Once we have found the key to that problem, it should be relatively simple to get people to want to DEMAND—greater safety in automobiles.

I've Never Been Hurt

What's with these narrow-minded, unimaginative, egotistical so and so's who won't use, or require use of, a guard or personal protection because, "I've done the same thing for 25 years and haven't been hurt yet!"

One such clown told me this once, even though a 19-year-old boy, under his supervision, had lost three fingers on the job one week before.

Just because the good Lord has smiled on some of us doesn't give us the right to throw others to the wolves.

What a super-elevated opinion one must have of one's capacity to try to take personal credit for such benevolence. Typical, however, one of the many people who will blame fate for accidents but feel personally responsible if they make a hole in one on the golf course.

Mere accidents statistics should be enough to convince the worst types of hardheads that bad things do happen occassionally, even though they have been sheltered from some of the hard facts of life.

A reasonable knowledge of the work and the simplest effort at analyzing the hazards of job methods and procedure should enlighten even the dullest creature on this score.

Sure, we can't prevent all unfortunate happenings, but we can put forth a reasonable effort.

Characters of this type keep efforts in accident prevention constantly behind the times. And, how can such narrow-minded unimaginative, egotistical so and so's do a good production job.

Fundamentals Of Citizenship

By Harold E. Fellows, President National Association of Radio & Television Broadcasters.

We should be nothing but optimistic about the future. Progress is being made toward understanding between peoples of the world. It is an extraordinary fact, for example, that many American citizens now see themselves as responsible citizens of the world, as well as of their own nation—and evolutionary viewpoint that has developed only during the last two decades.

Why? Because there is growing within each of us, or so it seems, a deeper appreciation of those five fundamental values that contribute to good citizenship: self-reliance, cooperation, faith, tolerance and friendship.

In their absence, the only other vision of the citizen is a gloomy one indeed.

I Believe

I believe in the dignity of safety because it protects me and my fellow workers.

I believe in the teachings of safety because they attempt to alleviate suffering for me and mine.

I believe in the magnanimity of safety because it creates conditions whereby workers may enjoy the fruits of their labor.

I believe in the useful service safety offers because it considers humanity as unexpendable—not comparing humanity with imanimate objects.

I believe in the supreme worth of safety because it teaches the worker to perpetuate his right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

I believe that the rules and laws of safety are made for man and that safety is the servant for the welfare of man.

I believe in the sacredness of safety because it creates a world whereby cleanliness and order reign.

And above all, I believe in safety because it considers the prolonging and preserving of life and limb so that mankind shall not be broken and maimed while striving for a decent livelihood.

The Bible Speaks To Your Need

By Rev. W. L. Bennett, Pastor
Sixteenth St. Baptist Church

"But God commendeth His love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners Christ died for us." (Rom. 5:8)

When man sinned, there were two things God might have done. First, He might have ignored sin and taken to Himself for all eternity a sinful, sinning, sin-saturated human race. Imagine an infinitely holy God ignoring sin! Impossible! God could never ignore sin, because He knows it in all its awful hideousness. Second, God might have ignored man, leaving him desperately alone in his hopeless distress. Again, such a course is unthinkable for a loving God.

One thing God did do about sin and sinners. "God commendeth His love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners Christ died for us." The only God-appointed way to deal with sin was by atoning blood. "Without shedding of blood there is no remission." (Heb. 9:22) Christ, by His own blood, atoned for sin and stood in the place of sinning men. God "made him (Christ) to be sin for us, who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him." (2 Cor. 5:21) So, and only so, could God be just and yet justify the ungodly.

But does Christ's blood atone for all sin, and does He take the place of all sinners? No, there is nothing automatic in the work of Christ. Man must respond to God's love in Christ. He must want Christ above all else, which desire will lead him to do three things: Repent or turn from sin; Exercise personal faith in the personal Savior, Jesus, who alone can save; Confess Jesus before men and submit himself unreservedly to Him. Christ then—but not until—becomes a reality to such a person. He becomes that person's very life (Col. 3:4). This experience of the living Christ, in turn, results in glorious experiences in the heart and life of the person:

1—He is justified in God's sight (Rom. 5:1) This means that the unjust sinner is made just—Pardon full and free, forgiveness without reservation. God looks upon him as if he never sinned.

2—He is made a new man through a new birth. God not only justifies, but He works an experience of regeneration within the person, which creates him a new person. (2 Cor. 5:17).

3—He is made holy in life and character (Ephes. 4:24).

4—He is given peace with God and peace of mind (John 14:27.)

5—Finally, he is called by God into His service (Ephes. 2:10).

HEART FUND

en into census tracts and the telephone operation is under direction of Mrs. W. B. Synder. Fringe areas of the city are under the chairmanship of Mrs. Elaine Odenwold and Rural areas, Mrs. Thomas Shreve of Brown Summit.

While it is expected most workers will be recruited by telephone Judge Preyer said he is hopeful that many civic-minded residents of Greensboro and Guilford County will take the iniative, as already many others have done, in calling Heart Sunday Headquarters to volunteer their services. This may be done by calling 5-6131, or stopping by 251 N. Greene St. Heart Sunday Headquarters or stopping by or calling the Heart Association office, phone 2-4234, 369 N. Elm St.

Heart Sunday organizers will seek to enroll a substantial roster of "Reserves" ... collectors who will be pressed into service on the afternoon of Heart Sunday if illness or other unforseable emergencies make it impossible for volunteers to make their rounds.

If Heart Sunday patterns are repeated, Judge Preyer explained, an overwhelming majority of the workers will be housewives, with father remaining home to mind the children. However, this is not necessarily so, for already there are 100 fathers who have volunteered. With the collection scheduled for the afternoon, he added, there is no problem of dark and unlighted streets. Most Heart Volunteers will complete their assigned house numbers within the hour ... unless they are invited in for tea and to visit ...

Exceptional weather for the past two Heart Sundays have made the whole project a delightful one ... volunteers have enjoyed getting out. But one thing has been learned, is the day is nice, volunteers must start on rounds of calls promptly at 1:00 o'clock before people start out on Sunday afternoon rounds of golf and rides.

Tryon, N. C., Site Of Olympic Preliminaries

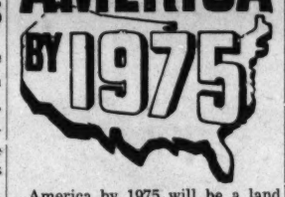
Visitors who want a look at some of the finest riders and horses in America are converging on Tryon, this winter to watch the U. S. Equestrian Team candidates prepare for the Olympic Equestrain Games which will be held in Stockholm, Sweeden, June 10-17.

Official Olympic Trials for the U. S. Prix or Jumping team will be held March 10-17 at Tryon, with special exhibits by the team candidates scheduled for March 3, 10, and 17.

Tryon's riding rings, jumping courses and hunting country—considered among the finest in the land and a mecca for horse lovers from all over the nation—have been made available to the U. S. Equestrian Team, Inc., non-profit public-supported organization which has provided American horses and riders for all international competition since the U. S. Calvalry was merchanized some years ago.

1956 marks the first year that North Carolina has been headquarters for Olympic Equestrian Games preliminaries. The all-year resort of Tryon was chosen because of its excellent facilities of horses and riders, its mild climate and varied terrain, and the enthusiastic cooperation of the Tryon Riding and Hunt Club and other local organizations and individuals.

Those vacationists who ride and hunt at Tryon this year find themselves in company with such noted riders as William Steinkarus, Hugh Wiley and Charles Dennesy, Jr., of the P. S. Equestrian Team, and Major Jonathan Burton, Walter Staley, Jr., Frank Duffy, and Warren Wofford of the Three-Day Event and Dressage squad. Jumping Coach Bert deNemethy is a graduate of the Hungarian Cavalry School who is associated with Miss Eleonora P. Sears' string of show hunters stabled at her Southern Pines, N.C., stables. In Tryon to coach the Three-Day Event and Dressage team candidates is another noted horseman, Major Robert J. Borg, of The Dallas, Oregon.



America by 1975 will be a land in which "more and bigger homes will provide an expanding market for furniture and other home furnishings, although growth will probably not be as rapid as for electrial items."

The National Association of Manufacturers cites the above from "The American Economy-Prospects for Growth 1950-1960-1970" by McGraw Hill Publishing Company in discussing the potentials of our country.

The report continues, "If they begin spending the same proportion of income on the home furnishings as they did back in the 20's.
